

BASEMENT 43

OCCUPATION 4

Ben Woodeson

Me love you long time

(AKA Five in Five)

Private views:

Anti-personnel steel rod thing

Monday 30th November 18.30 – 20.30

Randomly activated tripwire

Tuesday 1st December 18.30 – 20.30

Scary fucking spinning thing

Wednesday 2nd December 18.30 – 20.30

Twisted hazard

Thursday 3rd December 18.30 – 20.30

Constantly changing angles

Friday 4th December 18.30 – 21.30

(Extended opening)

Open Saturday 4th December 13.00 – 18.00 or by appointment,

Ben Woodeson will use his slot at Basement 43 to develop, finalise and exhibit a number of new installations. Each day Monday through Thursday will see a new experimental exhibition opening at 18.30 and closing at 20.00, by the following evening the preceding day's work will be gone. In some cases elements or documentation will survive into the next day, however, in others a complete rehang will have taken place. Friday's extended opening will run from 18.30 to 21.30 and will where possible include documentation from the week's work in addition to the final exhibition.

The works under development for the show are all part of the ongoing Health and safety Violation Series, so expect trip wires, garrotting cables, sharp spinning hazards, potential electrocution and chunky writhing ropes...

Specific shows may not be suitable for those fitted with pacemakers and or people who might be pregnant. As usual, these works may be dangerous and attendees do so at their own risk.

To clarify whether attendance might be inadvisable please contact:

benwoodesonmail@yahoo.co.uk

For further information and project updates:

<http://www.woodeson.co.uk>

<http://twitter.com/benisdangerous>

43B Hanley Road, London N4 3DU

WWW.BASEMENT43.CO.UK